Foreword

T HE CADUCEUS is merely additional evidence of the spirit of Progress which permeats every department of our institution. It has been our purpose to set down a complete account of our activities, social events, athletics and organizations during the past year. We have tried to show, in a small way, our appreciation of those men of the faculty who daily have given of their time and talents to the rounding and completion of our preparation for service.

If we have succeeded, even partially, in accomplishing this, the purpose of this book has been realized.

Dedication

T <sup>o</sup> THE former deans, whose far - reaching foresight, whose unceasing efforts, whose forceful personalities and whose unity of purpose has molded the policies and shaped the destiny of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, we dedicate this, the first Caduceus.

In Memoriam

COLONEL J. M. BANISTER, U. S. Army, (retired), was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1878. For thirty years he served in the medical corps of the U. S. Army at home and abroad. He belonged to the American Medical Association, the Otolaryngology, Rhinological and Otological society, and was a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology. He was president of the Nebraska State Medical Association 1919-1920.

He died January 31, 1929, following a long standing illness.

His soldierly dignified bearing, was symbolical of a spirit of integrity, honor and uprighteousness which will continue to inspire us even though he is gone.

-Dr. H. B. Lemere.

History

The CADUCEUS

J. JAY KEEGAN, M. D., Dean

THERE is much of romance, idealism and personal ambition bound up in the history of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine. This history dates back to 1881 through the Omaha Medical College and to 1880 in the establishment of the Nebraska School of Medicine and Surgery. And even before this, as far back as 1869, an attempt was made to establish a medical college in Omaha under the name of the Omaha Medical College. This college was incorporated under the laws of the State, May 22, 1869, but was not actually opened. The following physicians were elected as trustees: Doctors J. C. Denise, H. P. Mathewson, D. S. Mercer, James H. Peabody and J. P. Peck. Considerable work was done by the trustees in arranging the preliminary details looking to the opening of the College, but owing to various obstacles in the way and a growing feeling that the enterprise was premature, it was abandoned.

The real beginning of the Medical College was in 1880, when the Nebraska School of Medicine and Surgery was established. The following prospectus, taken from the records, expresses briefly the object and aims of the institution: "It is the mature judgment of our leading physicians, as well as prominent citizens of other business pursuits, that the time has arrived for the establishment of a medical school in our state. After deliberate consultation as to demands and the available means of conducting such an enterprise, the school has been organized under the name and title of the Nebraska School of Medicine and Surgery, and located at Omaha, a city of upwards of thirty-two thousand inhabitants and growing rapidly, supported by a state with five hundred thousand people, and with well established commercial relations existing between it and the adjoining states and territories. The school for the present, will be preparatory simply, but the instruction given will be thorough in all branches. Each chair will be represented by a man of experience and ability in his respective department. A number of eastern schools of medicine have established graded courses and allow students who are far enough advanced to enter higher classes; hence, students in the West can attend our school for one or two terms and then be admitted to advanced classes of other schools when their proficiency will warrant such advancement."

Rooms were rented in the third floor of the Hellman Block, Thirteenth and Farnam Streets, later known as the Dewey Hotel, and the announcement brought forth on the opening day a class composed of one dentist, one preacher, one old Eclectic, a shoemaker, a druggist, a clerk, two women, and two bright, well educated young men. Two later additions increased the class to the unlucky number of thirteen. However, this did not daunt the group of energetic and capable men in the faculty concerned with the management. The course of instruction continued for twenty weeks. Only one member of the faculty, Dr. Ayres, had had previous experience in teaching and there were few standards of medical education at that time. In spite of this handicap, everything worked harmoniously and at the end of the term the students found they had learned something of medicine and the Nebraska School of Medicine was judged an unqualified success. The faculty consisted of the following men: R. C. Moore, M. D., lecturer on Materia Medica; R. R. Livingston, M. D., Lecturer on Practice of Surgery; S. D. Mercer, M. D., Lecturer on Clinical Surgery; C. B. Ayres, M. D., Lecturer on Anatomy; V. H. Coffman, M. D., Lecturer on Practice of Medicine; J. C. Denise, M. D., Lecturer on Physiology; A. S. Von Mansfelde, M. D., Lecturer on Pathology; P. S. Leisenring, M. D., Lecturer on Obstetrics; W. S. Gibbs, M. D., Demonstrator of Anatomy.*

The success of the Nebraska School of Medicine convinced the founders that a well equipped medical college was actually demanded by the rapidly increasing population of Nebraska and contiguous states and territories. Stock was issued to raise the funds necessary for legal recognition, and the institution was incorporated under the laws of the State on May 22, 1881, as the Omaha Medical College. Dr. S. D. Mercer was elected president and Dr. R. C. Moore, Treasurer of the Board of Trustees.

The site of the newly incorporated College was selected on the southwest corner of Eleventh and Mason Streets. Two lots were purchased and on this land a twostory frame building was erected, adjoining the old St. Joseph Hospital. The College building, according to the announcement, "contained two large lecture rooms, laboratory, library and museum room, patients' rooms, dissecting and anatomists' rooms, and was fitted up with every convenience which pertained to a well equipped medical college."

During the first five years, the Omaha Medical College struggled through the vicissitudes of proprietary medical schools of that day. Instruction was rather poorly organized and the capital stock of the institution dwindled from ten thousand to six thousand dollars, the value represented in the building and grounds. But by good management the lots were sold in 1886 for a high price during the real estate boom then on, and the building was moved to the southeast corner of Twelfth and Pacific Streets. This was a turning point in the life of the College. There was then really a place for a medical college in Omaha. The city had grown in population and importance, both commercially and medically. The classes increased in size, and new members were added to the faculty.

The faculty of the first year of the Omaha Medical College consisted of the following: Robert R. Livingston, M. D., President, Professor of the Principles and Practice of Surgery; George B. Ayres, M. D., Secretary, Professor of Anatomy, Descriptive and Surgical, Curator of the Museum; V. H. Coffman, M. D., Professor of the Principles and Practice of Medicine; S. D. Mercer, M. D., Professor of Clinical Surgery; P. S. Leisenring, M. D., Professor of Obstetrics; J. C. Denise, M. D., Professor of Ophthalmology, Otology and Larynology; R. C. Moore, M. D., Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics; A. S. Von Mansfelde, M. D., Professor of Pathology and Histology; G. H. Peebles, M. D., Professor of Diseases of Children; H. P. Mathewson, Professor of Diseases of the Mind; Donald Macrae, M. D., Professor of Physiology; James Carter, M. D., Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology; John C. Corwin, Professor of Medical Jurisprudence; Werner Hemstead, M. D., Demonstrator of Anatomy.

The requirements for the degree of Doctor of Medicine at that time were much less than now. Entrance requirements were: eighteen years of age, a creditable English education, and good moral character. A three-year graded course was planned, but attendance was required upon only two courses of lectures, each of twenty weeks' duration. The first class was graduated on March 28, 1882, with the following eight members: Edward Diedrich, George V. Ellis, James E. Hadley, Fred D. Haldeman, Werner Hemstead, Robert Monteith, Urban H. Norris, and James W. Search.

The CADUCEUS

A separate chapter in the early history of the College of Medicine pertains to a University of Nebraska Medical College which was established in Lincoln in 1883 and was discontinued in 1887. This College was begun as a competitor of the Omaha Medical College and during the few years of its existence was fairly successful. The leader in the move and the first dean was Dr. A. R. Mitchell of Lincoln. The College had the advantages of State University incorporation and State financial support, which added prestige and reduced the student fees. Fourteen students enrolled the first year, but more than fifty entered the next year, since the state institution drew most of the students from the proprietary Omaha Medical College. The faculty of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in 1883 was as follows: A. R. Mitchell, M. D., Dean Professor of Descriptive and Surgical Anatomy; L. A. Merriman, M. D., Professor of the Principles and Practice of Medicine; E. H. Whitten, M. D., Professor of Gynecology; H. B. Lowry, M. D., Professor of Physiology and Diseases of the Nervous System; Wm. M. Knapp, M. D., Professor of Obstetrics and Diseases of Children; L. B. Graddy, M. D., (Omaha), Professor of Ophthalmology and Otology; H. H. Nicholson, M. A., Professor of Chemistry; N. J. Beachley, M. D., Demontrator of Anatomy; Paul D. Grossman, M. D., (Omaha), Professor of Surgery; Honorable O. P. Mason, Professor of Medical Jurisprudence. Later Dr. R. R. Livingston and Dr. S. D. Mercer of Omaha were added to the faculty.

The students of the opening year were as follows: William M. Blair, Mrs. Mary E. Case, Charles E. Dean, Isadore Ebert, John M. Frances, Benjamin F. Gay, Mrs. Thomas G. Humphrey, Sylvia Humphrey, Samuel B. Letson, Orin E. Mulvane, Clifford R. Tefft, William A. Thomas, Charles Trumbell, Adolph Wickersheime, Will F. Wiggins. The first graduating class was in 1884 and include the following eight members: Charles E. Boggs, William R. Bolding, K. M. Krecorian, Eugene D. Thurston, John M. Zielie, Elizah D. Buckner, William R. Knapp, and Norman A. Sackett.*

Dr. Mitchell has recently written an excellent account of the vicissitudes of the University Medical College. His description of the physical space and equipment follows: "The University in 1883 was a small affair, the only building, the old University Hall, housed all departments, there being but one or two small buildings on the University farm. The museum occupied but one half of the two largest rooms on the first floor of the north wing. The Medical School was given the other half, and utilized but half of that. A partition was thrown across the middle of the room, and an ampitheater built. The anatomical material for the professor of anatomy and other materials, manikin, charts, etc., were kept in the space under the raised seats. This room was cold, for the whole building was heated by stoves and a stove did not warm the part where the 'subject' was kept.

"The dissecting room was in another part of the city and was in constant danger of the police looking for mysterious things. The preserving vat for subjects was in an unknown basement reached by an alley entrance, and all material was secured in some mysterious manner and handled in the same way. There were many sensational articles in the daily papers, and once the Professor of Anatomy was before the grand jury to give testimony, and once again the same professor and the demonstrator were taken by the police 'with the goods,' but a trial proved their innocence, and the source of the material was never known, although we were out our good 'subject.' The details of many of these and other experiences would make interesting reading for the modern medical student."

University Hall as First University of Nebraska Medical College 1883-1887

In spite of the favorable beginning, this College lasted only four years. The Homeopathic and Eclectic forces of the State demanded representation in the State medical school. The Homeopathic group was added to the faculty the first year, the Eclectic group the second year, and separate examining boards were established for each school. The school became involved in the politics of the State Medical Societies and the Legislature of 1887 withdrew its appropriation, necessitating discontinuance of the College, by Regent's action May 19, 1887.

This early history of the Medical Colleges in Omaha and in Lincoln is most interesting on account of the pioneer period which it represents, both in the development of the state and of medical education. It was the era of the commercial or proprietary medical schools, which were organized for the primary purpose of personal advancement. However, many of the men who put their energy and their best efforts into these enterprises were animated by high ideals, and desired to maintain the highest type of medical school. They were leaders in their profession at that time and have continued to maintain this position, as the following list of names of those who are still members of the faculty will indicate: Dr. William F. Milroy, 1883; Dr. John E. Summers, 1887; Dr. W. O. Bridges, 1890; Dr. Harold Gifford, 1890; Dr. A. F. Jonas, 1892; Dr. H. M. McClanahan, 1892; Dr. F. S. Owen, 1893; Dr. B. B. Davis, 1896; Dr. E. L. Bridges, 1896.*

It was early recognized that affiliation with a university was desirable to remove the stigma of commercialism from the proprietary school. The first affiliation of the Omaha Medical College was in 1885 with the Methodist Episcopal College of Nebraska, located at York. This lasted only two years. A second affiliation was made in 1891, this time with Bellevue College, which through this move incorporated as the University of Omaha, with academic departments in Bellevue and the plan for professional and commercial departments in Omaha. This affiliation continued until 1902, when affiliation was made with the University of Nebraska. The connection with the University of Omaha was by name only and of little benefit to either instituition. The term pseudo-University Medical School might be applied to the period.

A new four-story College building of brick and stone construction, was completed in 1893, to replace the old frame building. This greatly increased the instructional facilities, and several pictures of class rooms were incorporated in the Bulletin of 1894-95. One of these is of particular interest as it represents a surgical clinic by Dr. A. F. Jonas.*

The College building completed in 1893 very soon became inadequate to meet the increasing demands made upon it, and in 1899 the trustees constructed an addition which doubled the capacity. With this enlargement came the Dental Department of the University of Omaha, and thereby hangs a tale of carnage and bloodshed which hardly deserves a place in this history.

The following men have been administrative officers of the Omaha Medical College during the early period before affiliation with the University of Nebraska:

The year 1902 was an epochal one, for the College then entered into an agreement of affiliation with the University of Nebraska whereby the first two years of the four year medical course were given in Lincoln and the last two years in Omaha. By the move the Omaha Medical College changed its name to the University of Nebraska College of Medicine. The course was lengthened to nine months each year and the University standards for laboratory work and examinations were instituted. The College then became an integral part of the State University.

Progress from this time on was steady and encouraging, although the handicap of division of the College was felt. A considerable number of the students during this period transferred at the end of the second year to eastern medical colleges, particularly Rush Medical College in Chicago. In 1909 agitation was begun for a new site and a more modern medical college building. Led by Dr. W. O. Bridges and Dr. J. P. Lord, an appropriation of twenty thousand dollars was obtained from the Legislature of 1909 for the purchase of land, with the understanding that certain financial interests of Omaha would furnish the funds necessary for buildings.

The present site was selected after much debate and the twenty thousand dollars expended in the purchase of land, but the building endowment did not materialize. Several additional lots were needed and were bought by prominent members of the faculty, with the understanding that they would be recompensed later for them. This was not done until finally in 1921, through the efforts of Regent John R. Webster, an agreement was entered into with the Board of Regents, whereby this money, with other donations, was set up as the Omaha Medical College Foundation, to promote medical education and research and to assist worthy students by loans.

In the meantime the College had passed through a very critical period in its establishment at the new site. Since no building funds were available by endowment as expected, it was decided to ask the Legislature of 1911 for an appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars for a Medical College building. Dr. A. C. Stokes was selected to go to Lincoln and try to put this through. The obstacles seemed insurmountable. Opposition, in addition to the natural reluctance of the Legislature to appropriate such a large sum of money, came from two sources. Lincoln opposed the bill because she desired to have the Medical College located there with the University; and Creighton interests urged the defeat of the bill because they felt that one medical college in Omaha was enough.

Representative Frank Ransom of Omaha introduced the bill. Dr. Stokes was on the ground and was ably assisted by Dr. A. P. Fitzsimmons and Charles W. Pool of Tecumseh. According to report, the bill was killed in committee or on the floor on nine consecutive occasions, but each time was revived and finally passed by one vote and was signed by the Governor in spite of attempts to have it vetoed or declared unconstitutional. It was a bitter fight and much credit is due those who spent their time and money in supporting the measure.

The first building on the present campus was the North Laboratory Building, completed in 1913, which housed all departments of the College. While it was under construction the Easter tornado swept directly across the campus, but fortunately the windows were not in and only a few room partitions were blown down.

The growth of the College of Medicine since 1913 has been remarkable. The total enrollment the first year was eighty-four students, compared to three hundred and twenty-two in 1928. Clinical facilities were obtained by affiliation with the Douglas County Hospital and several private hospitals of Omaha, and by maintenance of a Dispensary at 1716 Dodge Street. It soon became evident that adequate bedside clinical instruction could not be maintained without a University Hospital under the supervision of the College of Medicine. Accordingly, the Legislature of 1915 appropriated $150,000.00 to provide a teaching hospital which would be under the control of the Board of Regents of the University and would care for the worthy sick poor of the State. This was completed in 1917, and relieved the North Building of the administrative offices and the library. The School of Nursing was organized with the opening of the Hospital in 1917 under Miss Charlotte Burgess, R. N., Director.

The student enrollment in the College of Medicine soon outgrew the space in the North Laboratory Building and $180,000,00 was appropriated in 1917 to erect the South Laboratory Building. This was completed in 1919 and the Departments of Physiology, Pharmacology, Biochemistry, Dispensary, and Experimental Surgery were transferred to this building. The Nurses' Home was added in 1923, since the nurses had been housed in a temporary wooden dormitory and a fire on December 22, 1922, had seriously threatened their lives and partly destroyed the building. The second unit of the University Hospital was completed in 1927.

The College of Medicine, after fifteen years growth at the present site, has become one of the leading institutions of the country. Much credit is due the administrative officers of this period, and of the preceding University affiliation period which finally led to the establishment of the entire Medical College in Omaha. Dr. Henry B. Ward, of Lincoln, was first dean from 1902 to 1910 and was a most stimulating influence in improvement of standards of the College. Dr. Harold Gifford was Associate Dean in Omaha from 1902 to 1911. Dr. Robert H. Wolcott, of Lincoln, was Acting Dean from 1910 to 1914, and Dr. Willson O. Bridges Associate Dean in Omaha from 1911 to 1914. With the opening of the four-year college in Omaha in 1913, Dr. W. O. Bridges become Dean and Dr. Irving S. Cutter. Director of Laboratories. Dr. Cutter was appointed Dean in 1916 and resigned in 1925 to become Dean of Northwestern University Medical College in Chicago. He was succeeded by Dr. J. Jay Keegan.

School of Nursing

HE SCHOOL OF NURSING was organized in 1917 as a Department of Education in the University. This University connection affords the School those essentials in educational work, teaching facilities, laboratories, libraries, adequately prepared teachers, and an atmosphere of study which the ordinary hospital finds it difficult to supply. It gives the undergraduate training of the nurse the dignity and opportunity of University standing. The curriculum of the school follows a definite educational plan and includes Public Health and Community work as well as hospital service. Two courses are open to the students of the School. One course, which is three years in length, leads to the degree of graduate nurse; the other, a five-year combined course offered in the College of Arts and Sciences and in the School of Nursing, leads to the joint degrees of Bachelor of Science and Graduate Nurse. As the five year course was established to prepare women for the more highly specialized fields of work in the nursing service and for positions of leadership in their profession, the subjects in the academic program of the course were selected with reference alike to their cultural value and to their specific influence upon the future work of the nurse. In providing this more extended educational preparation for the student, which insures better scientific training, the school continues to emphasize the practical efficiency and skill of the individual student in the nursing care of the sick.

It has been the aim of the School from its beginning to prepare its graduates to meet community needs, to give efficient care to the sick in the community as well as in the hospital, and to furnish a good foundation upon which to build additional experience for the many responsible positions in the fields of administration, teaching and Public Health. The curriculum of the school has been organized with this aim in mind. The growth and ideals of the school have been increasingly encouraged and fostered by the active and sympathetic interest of the faculty of the College of Medicine and of the faculties of the other Colleges of the University.

THE BIG SISTER organization of the School of Nursing is but two years old. Its principles and purposes are those which insure to it success and accomplishment.

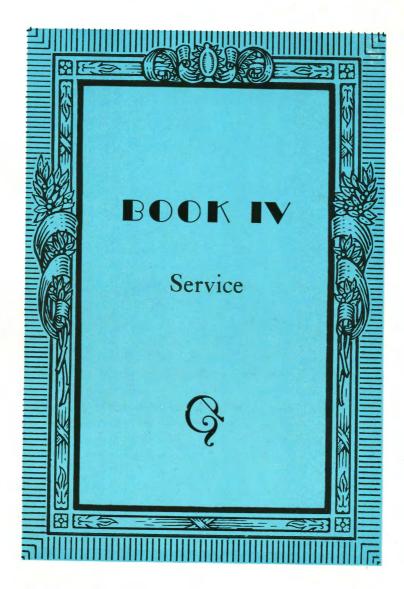

The aims of the organization are to establish a basis of individual friendship among the students of the School; to promote school activities; to stimulate the building and maintaining of the high standards of womanhood and scholarship as set forth by the Nebraska School of Nursing.

Thru these purposes is obtained a cooperative school spirit with its prevailing atmosphere of friendliness and helpfulness.

Each member of the new class is assigned a "big sister," who not only is an advisor, but is a friend to her; who aids in the forming of new friends and assists in adjusting her to her new work and new scholastic duties.

The School of Nursing is striving toward a finer and more complete program, one which will insure technical skill, a sound scientific background, and, underlying both, fine ideals of character, responsibility, and the spirit of service.

University Hospital

The CADUCEUS

FRANCIS J. BEAN Superintendent of Hospital Clark University A. B. 1917 Cornell University M.D. 1923

R. B. SAXON Operating Superintendent U. of Neb. B.Sc., M.E. 1917

THE UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL is a thoroughly modern, completely equipped, two-hundred and fifty bed, charity institution, which is under the direct control of the College of Medicine. The hospital is built on the unit plan. each unit having five floors, and the beds being arranged on a sixteen bed ward plan, in wings with central service and quiet rooms and a connecting corridor on all floors between units. On the ground floor are located the admitting department, complete with waiting room, admitting office and well equipped examining room; the kitchen, dining rooms, complete clinical pathology laboratories, necropsy ampitheater, purchasing and supply department, central storeroom for all hospital supplies and materials, library stack room, linen and sewing rooms, and a modern, well equipped department of Roentgenology and Physio-therapy. On the main floor are situated the College and Hospital Administrative offices; three medical wards, complete with adjoining isolation rooms, diet kitchens, laboratories and work rooms; the library reading room, medical ampitheatre, hospital record room and the basal metabolism laboratory. The second floor contains the resident physician's quarters, four surgical wards, and a photographic department which makes clinical photographs and lantern slides for teaching purposes. On the third floor are located the interne's quarters, two wards for Obstetrical and Gynecology, a Psychopathic ward, equipped with individual, sound insulated rooms and a three bed observation and recovery ward; and a Pediatrics ward with special type baby baths, and a sun porch, enclosed in ultra-violet transmitting glass. An occupational therapy room is maintained by the Faculty Women's Club.

The fourth floor contains a surgical ampitheatre and operating rooms, a children's Orthopedic ward, with a modern cast room; and a psychiatric ward, equipped for modern hydrotherapy. There is a sun porch at the end of each ward, a large solarium on each connecting corridor between units on every floor, and an open air porch on the top floor. All beds are equipped with five-inch castors, making it possible to take any patient to clinics for treatment or teaching purposes.

Library

MISS MADALENE HILLIS Librarian University of Wisconsin

THE LIBRARY of the College of Medicine is located in the north wing of the new hospital unit.

The reading room is on the main floor and will accommodate one hundred readers. It contains the current periodicals, nearly three hundred coming regularly, the last ten years of the bound volumes of the more important journals in the English language, and the indexes, loose-leaf systems of medicine and surgery, the card catalogue, the dictionaries, encyclopedias, and ready reference material. The office of the librarian opens from the reading room and there is a seminar room at the opposite end of the room which corresponds to the solaria off of the wards. The stack room is on the ground floor and is the same size as the reading room, with shelves for about forty thousand books. A book lift is installed between the two floors. A receiving room and a bindery are also on the ground floor, and a second seminar room connects with the one above by a small stairway.

The library was organized in 1913 when the College of Medicine of the University of Nebraska was opened in Omaha, but in reality dates back to the earliest teaching of medicine in the state. In it are incorporated the medical books from the medical department of the University of Nebraska, Omaha Medical College, Omaha-Douglas County Medical Society library, and the Nebraska State Medical Society library. This means that it has particularly complete and early files of the important foreign and American research journals and society transactions. It contains about 35,000 bound volumes and more than 16,300 unbound pamphlets. The library has laid much emphasis on acquisition of material of historic interest, including pictures, biographies, and histories of medicine and allied sciences. Most of these have come through gifts and fortunate purchases at low prices. We now have many useful copies of early classics and works of discovery, including three early editions of Harvey's work, one of which was borrowed and put on display at the New York Academy of Medicine last year when the Academy was celebrating the anniversary of Harvey's work. Many early works came from the libraries of Dr. Richard Moore, Dr. Denise, Dr. Mercer, Dr. Detwiler, and more recently, Dr. J. E. Summers and Dr. LeRoy Crummer. Among special collections should be mentioned a fine lot of about 150 very old herbals and pharmacopies. The selections represent the judgment of many specialists and while Dr. Cutter was Dean, he made a trip to Europe at which time he purchased about 3,000 volumes of English and French journals, many in complete runs.

The administration of the library is in the hands of the head librarian who is directly responsible to the Dean. A library book committee of the faculty passes upon requests for book purchases and all orders for new things must have its O. K. as well as that of the Dean. Miss Hallie Wilson was the first librarian and Miss Madalene Hillis is the second and present librarian. There are two regular assistants—Miss

Beulah Evans and Miss Anna Cope, and two student assistants each evening. The nurses have a special library and keep many of their books in a room opening off of the office of the Superintendent of Nurses. All of these books are catalogued and form a part of the main collection.

CA

The library has all of the important indexes of medical literature as well as the catalogue of the Surgeon General's library in Washington. When the reference material is not found in the library, it is borrowed from some other library through the inter-library loan system. The classified books are shelved on the east side of the stack room and the reports, transactions, and periodicals are arranged on the west strictly in alphabetical order. All of the equipment of the library is modern. Mr. Peter Jensen is employed as binder and thus the sets are kept bound up to date and in a uniform manner.

Many doctors and nurses practising in all parts of the state request bibliographies and references and package libraries are frequently sent in response. In addition, the library furnishes free service to the patients in the University hospital, books and periodicals being taken through the wards once a week. Most of the books belong to the University library but some are loaned by Omaha and Lincoln libraries. An average of ninety books and magazines has been loaned to these sick people each week and the service has been much appreciated.

Dispensary

MISS JOSEPHINE CHAMBERLAIN

THE DISPENSARY Department of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine was not distinguished from the hospital department during the first five years of the existence of the college, 1881-1886. From this time until 1913 it was located in the college building at Twelfth and Pacific streets. Then it was moved to 17th and Dodge from where it was transferred to its present location in April, 1920.

ENO.

The dispensary service is of great value both to the student and to the patient. This is evident from the fact that an average of 2,500 visits per month are made by patients to the dispensary. Students on out call service average 955 visits to 275 patients per month. Records kept from 1913 show that 43,879 patients have been treated to the present date.

Each senior student is required to serve four weeks on each of the thirteen services: Medicine, Surgery, Ear, Nose and Throat, Orthopedics, Tuberculosis, Eye, Newborn, Pediatrics, Obstetrics, Neurology, Dermatology, Gynecology, and Venereal Diseases. These services are the means of gaining very valuable experience for the student.

Patients calling at the dispensary are required to register with the admitting officer, Ruth Troxell, R. N., who refers them to the necessary department for examination. The history of the case and the physical examination are determined by a senior student, his report confirmed by the staff doctor in charge and the necessary treatment then given. A student assigned to a particular case has charge of it until the end of his service or until the patient is discharged. This service is furnished to anyone from any part of the country who is unable to pay doctor fees.

An important branch of the dispensary service is that of Public Health. This department was organized in the fall of 1926 and is supervised by Caroline R. Smith, B. Sc., R. N. Senior medical students and senior nurses are given instruction in conducting deliveries in the home. The purpose of the department is to give prenatal care to dispensary patients and health supervision to babies born in the hospital or in the home. The progress of these babies is followed from the time of birth until the age of two years.

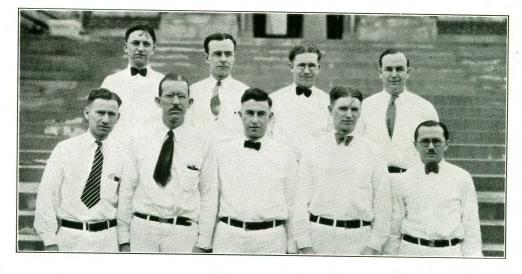

Call

Miss Josephine Chamberlain, R. N., is in charge of the dispensary and has done much in the building up of this department since May 15, 1919, at which time she first became actively associated with the University. Assistants to Miss Chamberlain are Eileen M. Greer and Elsie A. Hammond.

Internes

THE INTERNESHIP is a rotating, eighteen months' service, a new interne beginning duty every two months throughout the year. Services advance as follows: Pathology—all laboratory tests, surgical tissue examinations, dressing of infected wounds, and necropsy assistant; drug room and anaesthetics—maintenance of drug stock for hospital, and over one thousand prescriptions per month for outpatients, first assistant on anesthetics; Roentgenology and Physiotherapy—full time work, emergencies and outside work; Medicine—four months, including neurology and dermatology; Surgery, four months including orthopedic surgery, urology, fractures and neuro-surgery; Pediatrics—oto-rhino-laryngology ophthalmology, and assistant pediatrician to the Child Saving Institute; House Physician—obstetrics, gynecology, and admitting physician in the receiving department.

This interneship is not excelled anywhere in the country in the general training given and opportunities offered by a service in a teaching hospital.

Douglas County Hospital

THE DOUGLAS COUNTY HOSPITAL was established on its present site in 1888, almost forty-one years ago. During its growth, the hospital has had a most interesting history. A nurse's training school was established and was very successful for several years, until the difficulties of the World War caused it to be closed. At the present writing, the training school has not been reopened. Many graduates of this school have been exceptionally successful in hospital work, and several are engaged in public health activities in Omaha.

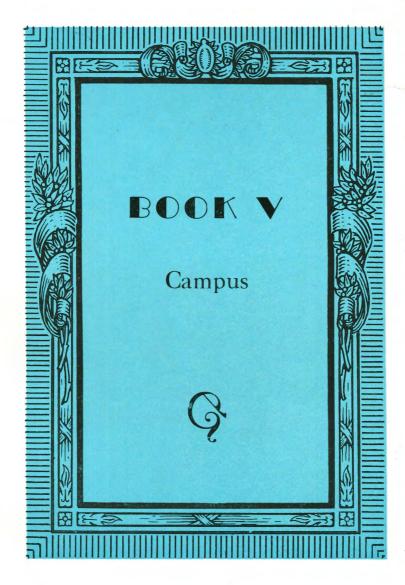

The hospital staff, while composed of physicians and surgeons from Omaha, also has had from the beginning several representatives from the faculty of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine. Dr. J. E. Summers has been chief of staff for thirty years, and it is largely through his interest and efforts that the hospital has kept its high standing through the years.

The relationship between the hospital and the Medical School is a most cordial one. Inasmuch as members of the faculties of both Nebraska and Creighton Medical College are members of the hospital staff, teaching privileges are allowed these schools. It goes without saying that there is a wealth of teaching material here and the student is offered a rare opportunity for study. During the past four years groups of ten to twenty students have taken their clinical work at this hospital and many clinics have been held in tuberculosis and psychiatric diseases.

The hospital now has one hundred and eighty beds, devoted to Medicine, Surgery, Tuberculosis, Psychiatry and Neurology. In the November elections the people voted a $750,000 bond issue to begin a new set of buildings for a hospital. Sometime within the next eighteen months we hope to have three buildings finished and ready for occupancy. The poor-farm inmates will be moved to a new home out of the city limits by fall. The future of the Douglas County Hospital is assured.

A LPHA OMEGA ALPHA is a non-secret, fourth year organization, medical honor society, membership to which is based entirely upon scholarship, moral qualifications being satisfactory. It was organized at the College of Medicine of the University of Illinois, August 25, 1902. It is the only order of its kind in medical schools on this continent and its definite mission is to encourage personal honesty and the spirit of medical research.

The organization embraces thirty-five chapters, all active, and all in schools of the highest rank in both the United States and Canada.

The local chapter was founded in 1914. It plans a series of addresses to be given annually and later, semi-annually in the college, by distinguished physicians and educators.

S IGMA OMICRON LAMBDA, an honorary senior men's organization, was founded at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine, May 10, 1922, having at this time twenty-six charter members. At present the membership is restricted to two men from each fraternity, elected by members of the previous year.

The aim of the organization is the promotion of a finer feeling of friendship among those to whom fellowship is one of the better things in medicine.

The CADUCEUS

Harold E. Petersen Editor

The Caduceus is presented by the Editor and Student Activities Council in response to the demand of the student body for a Medical College Annual. We have spent several months planning and producing this first representative annual publication-The Caduceus-in order that it might set forth the true spirit of the School-Progress. We hope that it will recall to the alumni fond memories of their days as students, and that it will renew their interest in the College. We hope that it will create a finer spirit of cooperation and friendship between faculty and students, which will uphold the traditions of the past and will enable the institution to grow and prosper. We wish to honor those students, faculty and friends who have assisted in building this book, and desire that it record another milestone in the rapid march of progress. May the 1929 Caduceus, which pictures today, help create in every heart a greater loyalty to the Alma Mater of tomorrow.

HAROLD E. PETERSEN, Editor.

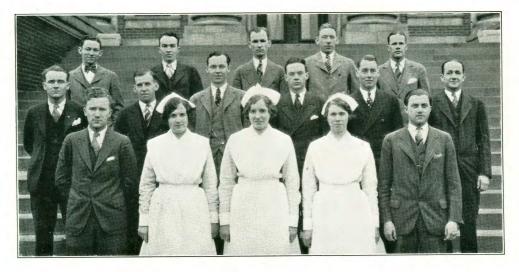

The name of the book—The Caduceus—has been selected as representative of the profession of Medicine. We have tried to publish a book worthy of our profession and of our school. If it fulfills its purpose, the credit is largely due to the hearty support and cooperation of the entire student body, faculty and alumni, which has made its publication possible. The advertisers also deserve much credit for their assistance and merit your support.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

THE EDITOR wishes to express his appreciation to those who have co-operated in the preparation of the first complete record of our school; portraits of the faculty and former deans; student portraits and student activities. To Dr. Keegan and Mr. Saxon the greatest thanks is due for their constant and sympathetic assistance in all matters. To Mr. Moes, the editor is indebted for the art work and to Mr. Weigand for the assembling of the material for the entire faculty section. Especial thanks is due Mr. Bowers, who daily assisted in preparing and organizing the contents of the book.

Student Council

THE present Student Activities Council is the first of its kind in the history of the University of Nebraska College of Medicine. The first meeting was held December 21, 1928. The Council was organized to promote and manage all student activities, including athletics, social activities, publications, speakers for the student body, and to stimulate more harmonious relations between the faculty and student body, and within the student body itself.

The membership consists of one voting member and an alternate from each fraternity, from the non-fraternity group, and the School of Nursing; the members being selected from the two upper classes, with the addition of one faculty advisor. The term of office for each is two years, serving as alternate the first year and voting member the second year, the senior member only having the power of voting.

Basket Ball

BASKET BALL has always been a popular sport among the student body. Athletic activities are limited throughout the fall and winter months so that about all sport must be carried on inside. Basket ball is the only team game that fills this requirement and is truly a very fine means of exercise. We are handicapped in this regard because the College does not have a gymnasium. All of the inter-fraternity competition has been held on the Technical High School floors. This is not entirely desirable but under the circumstances it is the best we are able to do.

This year the sport brought forth more well-balanced teams than ever before and hence the competition was keen and the interest at new heights. Furthermore, Phi Chi had two season victories to their credit and one more championship would have given them permanent possession of the rotating trophy. For this reason all organizations were determined that such an event should not occur and the tournament was a spirited affair.

The champions of the year are determined in the annual elimination tournament. This last season Nu Sigma Nu presented a well-balanced and fast working aggregation which carried off the honors after a thrilling match in the finals with Phi Chi.

Baseball

THIS sport enjoys the distinction of being the most popular one in the school program. As soon as spring is here, the baseballs and gloves are dug out of the heap and the fraternities start warming up their pitchers.

More men take part in this game, and the ever present desire to razz the umpire accounts for the large attendance. There is no doubt that one of our best methods of cheating spring fever lies in the fact that most of the fellows keep awake playing baseball.

The different teams test their superiority on the diamond behind the hospital. Each team plays one game with every other team and the victorious nine is so declared on a percentage basis. In the past two or three years, one loss almost meant the loss of the trophy.

The trophy as awarded by the Athletic Council, is very appropriate and competition for its possession has always been spirited. One team must win the trophy three years in succession before it permanently becomes their property. Phi Chi has won the trophy the past two years and it is expected that the games this year will be closely contested.

Track

RACK and field events have a colorful history at our College. The custom of inter-fraternity meets was inaugurated by a number of men particularly interested in the sport, and it was through their efforts that the Medic Relays were established.

The Medic Relays have always been looked forward to by the high schools of the state and at times they have gained a national interest when such stars as Lloyd Hahn have been our guests. It was formerly the custom to send invitations to the outstanding stars and high schools of the state to compete in a meet sponsored by the University of Nebraska College of Medicine. These meets brought together some of the best athletes in the state, to whom medals were awarded for individual excellence. The last Medic Relays were held in the Oval of the Omaha Technical High School.

Track is one of the few sports in which students of the College have opportunities to engage in active varsity competition. The "N" Club contains on its roster the names of such men as Kretzler, Davidson, Allen, Fisher, Slemmons, Diering and Lukens. All of these men have been outstanding in their events and are now graduates, engaged in the practice of medicine.

For the last two years inter-fraternity interest has not been keen enough to warrant continuing the sport. Track is one sport which requires training and one afternoon of active competition without previous training is not logical. It is hoped that this sport will become a matter of history as far as inter-fraternity competition is concerned.

The last two years have been contests between Phi Chi and Alpha Kappa Kappa almost entirely. Each time Phi Chi has been victorious by a small margin.

Tennis

A CTIVE play in inter-fraternity tennis has been stimulated by the presentation of the Faculty Tennis Trophy by the Faculty of the College of Medicine. This trophy rotates from year to year between the victorious teams and is not to become the permanent property of an organization.

This sport has always been regarded as a minor one in view of the fact that so few individuals are able to compete. This robs it of some of its inter-fraternity interest

Recently the tourney has more or less resolved itself into a challenge affair. The fraternity in possession of the trophy is considered the defendant and has always been more than willing to defend its honors. Other fraternities wishing to compete for the trophy must challenge the possessors. This system has worked satisfactorily except for the fact that not enough men are participating. We hope that the weather will be favorable enough this spring to have a "round Robin" tournament. The Phi Chi fraternity has been in possession of the trophy for the last two years.

Golf

The CADUCEUS

OLF is a sport which, in the last few years, has had an increasing popularity among the student body. Although not a particularly strenuous game, it is very good exercise, especially for those not used to hard physical exertion nor trained for more active team play.

This branch of sport is a relatively new one in our athletic program. It was long recognized that such a game was ideal for medical students, but because we had no links of our own and because play would have to start so near the spring examinations, it was never considered very strongly until two years ago. At this time the inter-fraternity athletic committee decided to add golf to our list of sports.

It has proven a big success. The tournament consists of four entries from each fraternity and play is divided into foursomes. Each foursome plays eighteen holes and the scores are added. The scores of all team members are totaled and the low score team is declared the winner.

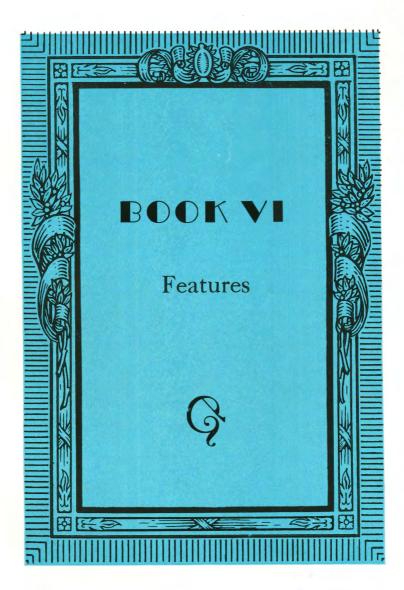

Honors the first year went to the Phi Chi's, but last year the Phi Rho Sigma team showed their superiority and they were awarded the banner.

Student's Wives' Club

THE Nebraska Medical Students' Wives Club was organized in June, 1927. The purpose of the club was to provide social recreation and to form new friendships. Since then, however, the activities of the club have been broadened somewhat, to include such forms of work as sewing for the "Child Saving Institute." Other activities are being planned for the near future. Membership is open to all Nebraska medical student's wives. The club meets every month at the homes of the members, at the fraternity houses, and at the homes of many of the doctors.

Pre-Medics

ONE OF the chief events in the calendar of the Pre-Med students, as well as the Medics, is "Pre-Medic Day," held early in May on the College of Medicine campus. In the morning a tour of inspection is made through all of the laboratories and buildings, under the guidance of medical students. This is followed by a short welcoming address and then the visitors are taken to the various ampitheatres where they witness several major operations. In the afternoon various sorts of enter-tainment are provided, usually a ball game for the men and a tea for the women. In the evening a smoker is held at the University Club, to bring together the students and faculty of the Medical College and the Pre-Medical students. Members of the faculty are the speakers and medical students assist in the entertainment with a musical and humorous program. Many of the visitors stay for the rest of the week-end to attend the theatre parties and dances given by the medical fraternities. The Pre-Medics are, in this way, given an insight into the work which they are to follow for the coming four years.

We are glad to welcome the Pre-Medical students each year, from Nebraska and the surrounding states, and extend a cordial invitation to them to visit us at any time.

R ICHARD C. DARCY was born in Lincoln, Lincolnshire, England. Near this town he received his training in the care of flowers, and for many years he kept a flower farm rivaled by few in the beauty and variety of flowers known to England. Darcy has been known to all students of the College since 1913, when he came from Lincoln to look after the grounds and physical plant of the new campus. During this early period he carried the responsibility of operating superintendent of the institution. With the growth of the College, Mr. Darcy has devoted more of his time to the grounds and has won an enviable reputation for the beauty of his flowers and the attractive setting of his trees and shrubs. He has made the campus one of the beauty places of Omaha.

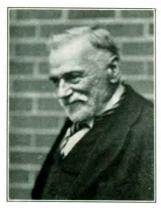

RICHARD C. DARCY

It would be hard to conceive of the Medical College without Mr. Darcy, for he has held a responsible position for many years and has impressed his personality and efficiency upon all with whom he has come in contact.

ROBERT" was born in Allentown, Pennsylvania, in 1857. He was raised on a farm near this town and it was here that he achieved his education. In 1872 he turned his eyes westward and set out to make his fortune in the promised land of Nebraska. He, with his father, took a homestead near West Point, and remained there for twentyfive years, and where he taught school for several years. At this time he journeyed to Texas and points south, hoping that a change of climate might help his mother's failing health. Twelve years ago he came to Omaha, liked it, and stayed. He has been employed by the Nebraska College of Medicine all this time, and will be remembered by many a Nebraska graduate. "Robert," as he is known to the students, ardently labors to keep the buildings looking up to standard and prides himself particularly as being chief caretaker of the flag.

Interpretation of the "Caduceus"

The CADUCEUS

HIS article, based largely upon researches published by Dr. Marcel Baudouin in La medecine internationale (1917-18), goes to show how much has been added to our knowledge of the evolution of the caduceus symbol since the discovery and interpretation of the beautiful and typical caduceus on the Babylonian vase of 3000 B. C., now in the Louvre. The caduceus, it appears, has now even a prehistory. Three staves of reindeer horn of the Palaeolithic Period, found by Piette in caves of the Pyrenees, have carved serpent heads; another specimen, from Montgandier (Charente), has two serpents engraved upon the bone; another, from the Madeleine (Dordogne), shows two serpents entwined; another, from Teyjat, has three serpents. Whether in the uraeus or cobra-crest of godhead, the ankh or handled cross (crux ansata), or the images of the winged cobra-gods, Unatchet and Nekhebet, the serpent and the caduceus crop up everywhere in Egyptian mythology. The cobra symbol, indeed, traveled as far as the Scandinavian peninsula and Yucatan. In the Phoenician culture, the caduceus becomes the symbol of maritime commerce, figured on the prow of ships as well as on stelac. In Greek mythology, it becomes the magic wand of Mercury, the messenger of the gods, the conductor of souls to Hades (Hermes psychopompos), the god of commerce and of thieves. In Rome, it becomes the heraldic device of the caduceator or peace commission, in other words, the equivalent of a flag of truce; while Aesculapius, the god of medicine, becomes, like Egyptian Nekhebet, a serpent-god, with a club entwined by a single snake as his symbol. One author calls the Aesculapian symbol the "medical caduceus," and the Mercury symbol the "commercial caduceus." His attempts to interpret these symbols are somewhat eclectic and dispersed, and only a few of the essential data are mentioned by him. It is in subsequent developments that the real slant of the subject comes out. The Greek or "commercial" caduceus, as Dr. Lenoury informs us, is not unknown to medicine. It came to be borne aloft as the mace or truncheon of ushers and beadles at medical ceremonials, e. g., when Shakespeare's Dr. John Caius revisited Gonville and Caius College (Cambridge) on March 25, 1558, or as seen in Charcot's clever caricature of his colleagues of the Paris Medical Faculty. To Caius it symbolized the "wisdom of the serpent" (serpentes prudentiae indices), so essential to the physician. But even before Caius' time, the caduceus appears suddenly and spontaneously, in the sixteenth century, as a medical symbol on the coat of arms of Sir William Butts, physician to Henry VIII, and as the emblem of the Swiss medical printer, Froben. It remains a fixture of the Paris Medical Faculty, and in it appears again on the title pages of books printed by the London medical publisher, Churchill. In 1856, eight years before the Geneva Convention (August 22, 1864), it appears on the chevrons of stewards of the United States Army, as indicating the non-combatant status of litterbearers. In 1901, Le Caducee, a French periodical of military medicine is founded, and one year later (1902), the caduceus makes its first appearance on the uniforms of medical officers of the United States Army, while, from the first, the coat of arms of our Medical Corps (circa, 1818) bore the Aesculapian staff, which also appears on the insignia of medical officers of the British and French Armies. The late Col. John Van R. Hoff, once editor of the Military Surgeon, was of opinion that the usage of the caduceus in our Medical Department insignia is analogous to its use by the Roman caduceator as a badge of his neutral status on the battlefield. As Dr. Lenoury points out, it also differentiates our Medical Corps from those of other nations. There is, therefore, no sense in the proposition sometimes made to change it.

Interpretations of the serpent symbol are many, and none more ludicrous than the phallic implication advanced by some later devotees of the Freudian cult. As with everything else of unknown nature, the snake was probably venerated and deified by the ancients, because they were afraid of it. As a symbol of godhead, it then became a symbol of wisdom and power, just as money implies stored up or potential (convertible) energy. This is apparent in the images of the Cretan Mother Goddess and the snake dances of the Hopi Indians, as also in Shakespeare's line:

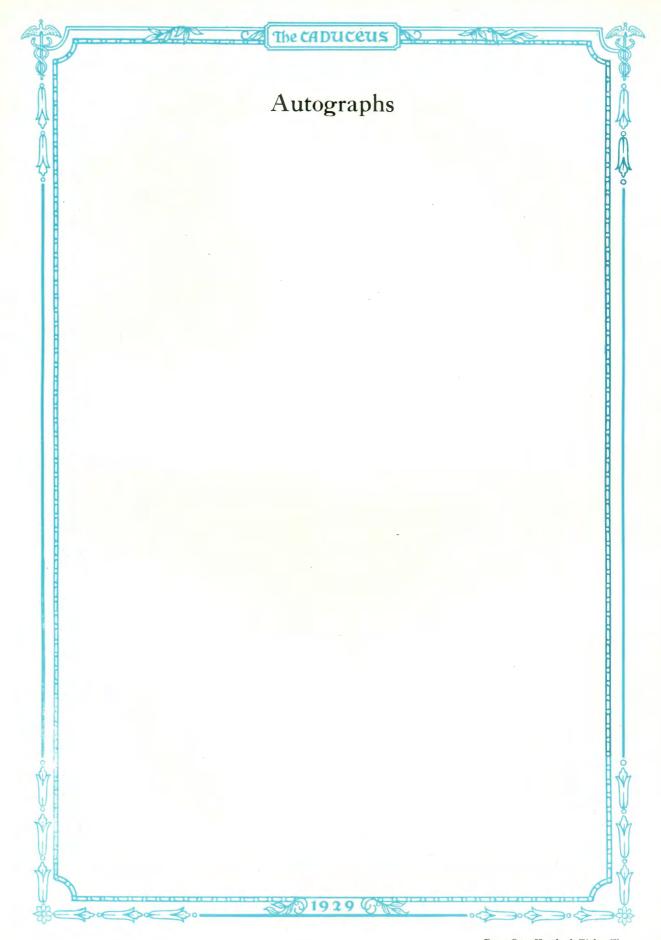

"And Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus."

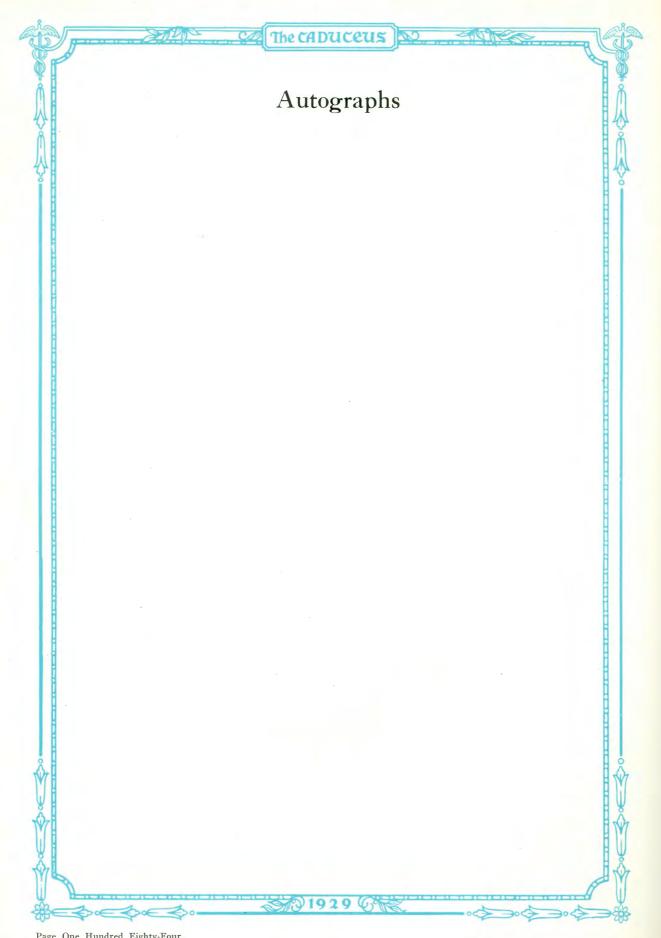

Moreover, all major gods, of whatever mythologies, have medical (healing) functions. The Greek words for snake (ophis) and the eye (ophthalmos) both derive from the same root, whence the snake becomes the gazing animal, "the creature that is always looking at you." By a stretch of imagination, the serpent might thus be regarded as standing for the observant nature of physicians. A badge used by physicians at a medical meeting of 1920 represented a snake as disengaging itself from the Aesculapian staff in order to drink a cocktail. Perhaps the snakes seen in delirium tremens may also have impressed the ancients.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The following list includes the names and addresses of alumni from 1882 to 1929, as found on file in the college office. The only method of obtaining such information is from the alumni themselves. It would, therefore, be appreciated if those men who have changed their addresses or who know of any other graduate who has done so in the last few years would please send such information to the college office.
