

As the first author of the paper “Cyclin-dependent kinase 1-mediated phosphorylation of protein kinase N1 promotes anchorage-independent growth and migration” published on Cellular Signalling in 2020, I have the right to include this paper in my dissertation.

The screenshot shows the Elsevier website's 'Author rights' page. The page title is 'Author rights' and it contains a table detailing the rights of authors for different publication types: 'Author rights in Elsevier's proprietary journals', 'Published open access', and 'Published subscription'. The table lists various rights such as retaining patent rights, re-use of material, and public sharing of preprints and manuscripts.

Author rights in Elsevier's proprietary journals	Published open access	Published subscription
Retain patent and trademark rights	✓	✓
Retain the rights to use their research data freely without any restriction	✓	✓
Receive proper attribution and credit for their published work	✓	✓
Re-use their own material in new works without permission or payment (with full acknowledgement of the original article): 1. Extend an article to book length 2. Include an article in a subsequent compilation of their own work 3. Re-use portions, excerpts, and their own figures or tables in other works.	✓	✓
Use and share their works for scholarly purposes (with full acknowledgement of the original article): 1. In their own classroom teaching. Electronic and physical distribution of copies is permitted 2. If an author is speaking at a conference, they can present the article and distribute copies to the attendees 3. Distribute the article, including by email, to their students and to research colleagues who they know for their personal use 4. Share and publicize the article via Share Links, which offers 50 days' free access for anyone, without signup or registration 5. Include in a thesis or dissertation (provided this is not published commercially) 6. Share copies of their article privately as part of an invitation-only work group on commercial sites with which the publisher has a hosting agreement	✓	✓
Publicly share the preprint on any website or repository at any time.	✓	✓
Publicly share the accepted manuscript on non-commercial sites	✓	✓ using a CC BY-NC-ND license and